

Welcome to this tutorial on group work

This resource was prepared as a flipchart using Promethean software.

Group work is easy to recognise...

...in a professional team...

...in the classroom...

... or on the sports field.

Group work is an appropriate strategy when people need to work together to:

- share limited resources,
- share information from different sources,
- use their expertise to help others.

he does the filming (camera operator)

she tells him what to say (director)

he holds the microphone (boom operator)

he appears on TV (host)

he makes sure everything runs smoothly (producer)

Group work may not be appropriate when the task can be accomplished individually.

For group work to be effective, each member needs a job in the group. Look at the following examples:

- Which ones are groupwork?
- Can you identify each person's job in the group?

How many groups are there in the photograph?
